chicken and egg curry

You don't have to decide which comes first in this simple, creamy curry. If you leave out the chilli, it's a real family crowd-pleaser.

Ingredients

6 eggs
 800g chicken thigh fillets, cut into 5cm pieces
 3 tsp ground turmeric
 1 tsp salt, plus extra to season
 2 tbsp vegetable oil
 2 onions, peeled and sliced
 5 garlic cloves, peeled and roughly chopped
 2cm ginger, peeled and grated
 1 tbsp ground coriander
 1 tbsp ground cumin
 2 tsp garam masala
 1 tsp chilli powder (optional)
 400g can diced tomatoes
 300ml thickened cream

Method

1. Bring a pot of water to the boil and add the eggs. Reduce the heat and simmer for 8 minutes. Remove the eggs and shock in iced water until completely cool, then peel.
2. Combine chicken with 1 teaspoon of the turmeric and salt and set aside for 10 minutes.
3. Heat a large, deep frying pan over medium heat and add the oil. Add a pinch of turmeric and fry the eggs until coated with the yellow oil and lightly browned. Remove eggs from the pan, then fry the chicken in batches until lightly browned (the chicken doesn't have to be cooked through). Remove chicken from the pan and set aside.
4. Add a little more oil to the pan if needed, then the onion, garlic and ginger and fry for about 8-10 minutes, until softened. Add the coriander, cumin, garam masala, chilli (if using) and remaining turmeric and fry for a minute until fragrant. Add the tomatoes and a cup of water and bring to a simmer. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes. Add the chicken and simmer for 5 minutes, adding water if needed to maintain a thick curry consistency. Stir through the cream and eggs and simmer for a further 5 minutes, then taste and adjust seasoning.

Fisherman's Pie

Seafood is topped with creamy mash that blends into a rich sauce. Who says you shouldn't mix seafood and cheese?

Ingredients

150g hot-smoked salmon, broken into chunks
 400g monk fish fillets, cut into 5cm chunks
 400g good-quality marinara mix
 2 cups frozen peas
 2 tbsp finely shredded parsley
 2 tbsp finely shredded dill
 2 cups grated cheese
 Salt and white pepper, to season

Mornay sauce

60g butter
 1 onion, finely diced
 ½ bulb fennel, finely diced
 ¼ cup plain flour
 1 cup milk
 1 cube fish or chicken stock
 2 cups grated cheese

Mashed potatoes

1kg potatoes, peeled and cut into chunks
 150ml thickened cream
 50g butter

Method

1. Heat your oven to 200C fan-forced (220C conventional). For the mornay sauce, heat a medium saucepan over medium heat and add butter, onion and fennel. Fry for about 2 minutes until softened. Add the flour and stir to cook for a further minute or two. Add the milk a little at a time and stir to create a thick sauce. Crumble in the stock cube and stir through the cheese until melted. Combine the sauce with the seafood, peas, parsley and dill, reserving a little of the herbs for garnish. Transfer to a large baking dish.
2. For the mashed potatoes, place the potatoes into a large saucepan and cover with cold water. Simmer for about 15 minutes until the potatoes are tender. Drain, return to the pot and mash with the cream and butter to a smooth mash. Season very well with salt and pepper.
3. Top the seafood filling with the mash and scatter with the cheese. Bake for 15-20 minutes until the cheese is melted and golden brown. Scatter with the remaining herbs and serve.

BARBARA REESE

Died peacefully in her sleep on January 11, 2023, in her 97th year.

Barbara was a true and respected friend of Hanmer Springs and everyone who lives here. She loved this town and never really wanted to live anywhere else and it was only her failing health that saw her move away from her home in Leamington Street only a few months ago. Whether it be the knitting circle or the golf club, Barbara loved company and in return was loved by everyone she encountered. She was always beautifully groomed and forever a lady, in the true sense of the word; well mannered, courteous and refined and with a warm sense of humour.

She was also mother to five children, and grandmother (Bardy) to nine grandchildren and five great grand children.

Her involvement in the Hanmer Springs Golf Club was legendary and she was made a life member several years ago. It is true to say that in later years the golf club was the major thing in her life, whether as a player or a friend. Until two or three years ago she still played actively in club days and tournaments.

When playing became too difficult Barbara remained a regular at the club and if there was a tournament or event, she would be found in the kitchen buttering bread for sandwiches, or sitting out front selling raffles or helping the scorers, seeking a continuing involvement. She was a regular visitor to the cemetery visiting the grave of her beloved husband David. (She still insisted on being known as Mrs David Reese.)

Hers was a life to be celebrated and she would be the first to say that was preferable to sadness at her passing. And she always looked to the day when she would be reunited with her beloved David.

Go in peace Barbara, knowing you were loved.

(At the time of writing all we know is that the funeral service and celebration of Barbara's life will be held at St Augustine's Anglican Church, 5 Cracroft Terrace, Cashmere, at 11.00am on Friday, January 20, 2023 but there will surely be some form of memorial in Hanmer.)

Capitalism

What's the matter here?

Why has so little progress been made on climate change, even as the dangers have become ever more apparent?

According to one school of thought, the problem has to do with incentives. There's a great deal of money to be made selling fossil fuels—just in the first quarter of 2022, twenty-five of the world's largest oil-and-gas producers announced profits of close to a hundred billion dollars—and still more money to be made by burning fossil fuels to make stuff to sell, from sunglasses to steel girders. Meanwhile, the costs of climate change can be fobbed off on someone else. To use the technical term, they are a “negative externality.” In the words of the Stern Review, a report commissioned by the British government in 2005, climate change “is the greatest and widest-ranging market failure ever seen.”

By this account, the obvious solution is to realign the incentives—to internalise the externalities. If the cost of the damage caused by a ton of CO₂ was borne by the business (or individual) responsible for emitting that ton, then the business (or individual) would be motivated to cut back.

“A carbon tax offers the most cost-effective lever to reduce carbon emissions at the scale and speed that is necessary,” a 2019 statement signed by thirty-five hundred economists, including twenty-eight Nobel Prize winners, declared. Such a tax would move “the invisible hand of the marketplace to steer economic actors towards a low-carbon future.”

According to a second school of thought, the trouble runs a whole lot deeper. Our political system is dominated by corporate money in general and fossil-fuel money in particular. (Last year, in the USA, the oil-and-gas industry reportedly spent a hundred and twenty million dollars lobbying Washington, and it probably spent a great deal more via front groups.)

It's therefore naïve to imagine that policies that cut into fossil-fuel profits will be enacted. And even if they were, they wouldn't solve the essential problem, which is that the “invisible hand” always grasps for more. If it's not more oil, it will be more lithium to build batteries, and if it's not more lithium it will be more cobalt, mined from the bottom of the sea.

“When it comes to global warming, we know that the real problem is not just fossil fuels—it is the logic of endless growth that is built into our economic system,” Jason Hickel, an economic anthropologist at the Autonomous University of Barcelona, has written. Climate change can't be dealt with using the tools of capitalism, because it is a product of capitalism. It can be dealt with only by throwing off capitalism in favour of something else—a system aimed not at growth but at “degrowth.”

“The difficult truth is that, to prevent climate and ecological catastrophe, we need to level down” is how the British environmental writer George Monbiot recently put it.

A third line of thought—perhaps too bleak and unpopular to be called a school—is that, if big change is hard, bigger change is even harder. How are we going to build a whole new economic system if we can't even enact a carbon tax?

HANMER NOTES

(The Press—early 1900s)
By An Occasional Visitor

Having recently had a sharp attack of influenza, and been ordered by my medical officer to take a trip to Hanmer to thoroughly shake off the effects, I journeyed northward on Monday last in anything but prepossessing weather. I noticed a marked improvement since my last visit, inasmuch as the train now starts at a more respectable hour, viz., 8.50, and much of that annoying delay in taking off and dropping off trucks at the varying wayside stations has been stopped.

Arriving at Culverden one was ready for the appetising dinner waiting at the Culverden Hotel, now managed by Mr Anderson. In looking over the building I noticed it has now been thoroughly painted and renovated. The sanitary arrangements were perfect, a septic tank arrangement being in operation. On reach the Waiau Ferry another surprise appeared in the new and substantial hotel (built 1905 which dates this article to that time. Ed.) which stood on the site of the old hostelry, so well known to travellers on this road and where a cup of hot tea, or something stronger, is always welcome after the rattling coach ride. Hanmer was reached at 4.30 p.m., after a journey of seven hours, which is a great improvement on the time taken a year or so ago. Very cold weather is being experienced just now. Snow fell in constant quantities during Sunday, with the result that the township is surrounded with snow clad hills. From a scenic or spectacular standpoint the outlook is beautiful in the extreme. From an occasional visitor's point of view, however, the snow looks well at a distance, but he would prefer a sample of more spring-like weather.

So far as accommodation goes, I find there are some eight public caterers, viz., The Spa (not the Sanatorium, please), The Lodge, Mrs Lahmert, Jollies Pass Hotel, Mrs Ashton, Miss Fawcett, J W Fawcett and Mr Farrow. Having made enquiries as to the number that could be accommodated, I find that it amounts to about two hundred and fifty, but at a pinch, as has happened at Christmas and Easter, considerably more, because shakedown and tents are then brought into requisition. Some of the more prominent residents fear that Hanmer as a health resort has been considerably damaged, owing to a rumour having got abroad that the township was not in a sanitary condition. Certainly, during the last two years many of its former patrons have not put in an appearance, but the rumour is utterly false. Another rumour that has gained a foothold is that the waters of the springs have lost their medicinal value since the gas has been taken from the wells and used for lighting purposes in the Spa buildings. Mr J B Gould, the Manager of the Spa, laughs this idea to scorn. He informs me that some time ago a gentleman who takes a prominent interest in the welfare of Hanmer, procured samples of the waters of the springs, and at his own expense had them analysed by Professor Black, with the result that they were to have been not in any way deteriorated. Another gentleman, who is hot on the subject, forcibly expressed his opinions to me, to the effect that whether there was any truth to the rumour or not, the practice of tapping the springs for gas was utter nonsense and ought to be at once stopped. The small cost of an acetylene gas plant compared to the harm it was doing in the public estimation was infinitesimal. He was also of the opinion that unless something was done some of the business people who had sunk capital, with a view of providing accommodation, would have to seek fresh pastures.

On making further enquiries, I find that there is a well-defined antagonism existing between the various accommodation house proprietors and the Spa. They complain of the Government coming into competition with private, and contend that their institution was inaugurated as a sanatorium for the benefit of those who were sick and those unable to pay more than a moderate amount for their keep. The name sanatorium is now non est and the more aristocratic name of the Spa has taken its place.

I have heard on good authority that a person who was sick was, after a short stay, requested to move her quarters — and we live in a land ruled by a Liberal and so-called philanthropic Government. The question is also asked, is the institution a paying concern or simply a white elephant, and in some respects I am led to believe the latter suggestion. I am informed that it cost the country considerably more than a thousand pounds last year over receipts, and this it must be remembered after everyone is taxed to the highest for baths, games and amusements.

The motor bus service from Culverden which was advocated at the meeting Wednesday night is a project that has been on the tapis for some time, but the government can't or won't inaugurate the service. The suggestion was first mooted by one of the candidates who stood for the Avon constituency 3½ years ago. At the time he was laughed at and his harrowing account of the effects of the coach journey on a person in delicate health was looked upon as a piece of political bluff. But now the residents are in earnest and they intend to do or die.

The question of a light railway has been dangled before the district for a considerable time, but anyone in his senses must see that such expenditure (£2 to £300,000) is altogether out of the question. With upkeep and expenditure it would be a white elephant. With several up-to-date motor buses and the waters courses bridged, the service would be sufficient for many years to come.

Another standing grievance which the residents have against the Government, whose persistent apathy in booming the place is proverbial, is the long expected water supply, which has been a promise for a considerable time past, but which appears to be as far off a reality as ever.

WHAT DOES THE NET ASSETS VALUE OF NEW ZEALAND HOUSEHOLDS LOOK LIKE?

(The data is as at March 2022 but with house prices having slipped back over the last six months it could still be quite realistic.)

Pita Alexander

Liabilities		Assets
Household Mortgages	$232 billion	House and Sections	$1,306.65 billion
Consumer Loans	$14.71 billion	Currency Asset.	$5 billion
Student Loans	$16 billion	Deposits with Banks	$209 billion
	$262.71 billion	Other Securities	$4 billion
		Loans	$0.3 billion
Suggested Net Assets of All		Share Market (Unlisted)	$98 billion
N Z Households (1)	$2,421.08 billion	New Zealand Businesses	$665 billion
		Share Market (Listed)	$124 billion
(Note		Life Assurance/Superannuation	$136 billion
Based on say, 1,953,900		Other Assets	$135.84 billion
NZ households, this represents around $1.238,101 per household)
	$2,683.79 billion		$2,683.79 billion

Thoughts and Comments arising from the Schedule:

*The data, in the main, is coming from the New Zealand Statistics Department and is relatively new data - very often in the past household net assets only applied to housing assets and net assets and not overall assets.

*The net assets involved with housing and net assets not involved with housing are both significant and relatively similar in value.

*The household deposits in the NZ banking system of $209 billion are surprising and represent $109,424 per household.

*This sort of data alters every day.

The data is suggesting housing assets of	$1,306.65 billion
Less long-term debt	($232.00 billion)
	$1,074.65 billion
Non-housing assets of	$1,377.14 billion
Less related debt	($30.71 billion)
	$1,346.43 billion

*The average net assets per household of $1,239,101 is surprisingly high and there will be some enormous variations across the whole country.

*Presumably the $135.84 billion of other assets includes furniture, boats, cars, household chattels, toys, lawnmowers, artwork, jewellery etc - it comes out at $69,522 per household, which seems possible.

*The data surprised the writer at first sight - I have attached the New Zealand Department of Statistics publication of 14 July 2022, which shows the key figures.
